WESTERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMING HERE

OCEAN SHORE ROAD TO BE RUSHED TO COMPLETION

District Approved By Action From Secretary Of State's Office

TO START AT ONCE

Pedro Point and Wardell Bluffs To Be First

Work will be rushed immediately upon the ocean shore road, according to Supervisor John W. Poole, who is a director of the tri-county highway district which is to construct the highway between San Francisco and Santa Cruz along the shore line of this county. Poole reported to the board of supervisors Monday at the regular meeting of that body, that actual work on the road would be under way within a week. The tri-county district was formed by the three counties some time ago, but was only given the official sanction of the secretary of state last week when Frank C. Jordan designated the district as Joint Highway District No. 9. Following a report to this effect by Supervisor Poole, the board of supervisors proceeded to re-appoint Poole as a director of this district, as it is necessary that all directors be reappointed following the official designation of the district by the state secretary.

Poole stated this week that he believed that it would be possible to have sections of the road completed before winter. The roadway will be 100 feet wide and will for a portion of its route in this county follow the unused right-of-way of the defunct Ocean Shore Railway. This will eliminate many of the grades encountered in the present Pedro Mountain road and will also shorten the route by a considerable distance.

It is the intention of the board to begin the construction work at Pedro point section in order to save as much of the railway bed as possible, as this is being rapidly eroded by the winter freshets. The section of the road in Santa Cruz county which passes along the base of Wardell bluffs will also be started immediately. With these two sections out of the way the work can be carried on a portion at a time until the whole length of the highway has been improved.

The district which is constructing this roadway consists of the three counties of San Mateo, Santa Cruz and San Francisco. The expense of the work is being divided in a proportion of 20, 15 and 65 percent for the three counties, respectively.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Muller are enjoying a motor trip through the northwest, and plan to visit Portland, Oregon, and Lake Tahoe on their trip.

Speaker To Tell Of Redwood City's Flower Industry

The cut flower industry of which Redwood City is a center will be the subject of an address before the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce Monday noon by Wm. A. Boodell, Jr., of the firm of Boodell & Newsom, local flower shippers.

The chrysanthemum industry is one of the greatest industries of the county, and annually train loads of flowers are shipped from this section to all parts of the world. The annual crop represents many thousands of dollars. Through an agreement with the Belmont Farms Company, Boodell & Newsom have secured the shipping agency for practically all of te chrysanthemums grown here. The firm has opened an office on Broadway and maintains a warehouse and shipping department at the gardens.

Kiwanians Hear Intimate Story Of Chinese Wars

The reason for the present condition in China, according to Commander John M. Blackburn, U. S. N., who addressed the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday, lies in the teachings of Confucius. That Chinese philospher many hundreds of years ago founded a system of philosphy which made the family of the supreme factor in his land. There can, said Blackburn, be no city, no national or community patriotism in China, because for generations the Chinaman's interest has been limited to his family.

Blackburn also explained the handicap which the written and spoken language of China has proved to be to a national development, and how the Confucian doctrine which makes a large number of descendants a prime necessity to the future happiness of the soul has resulted in great masses of people who live all their lives in the shadows of starvation.

The chairman of the meeting was Dr. John N. Blood. Ed Harrison, vice-president of the club and close friend of Commander Blackburn, acted as president.

Commander Blackburn has been on active service in the navy for 29 years and has spent much of that time in the Orient. During the late war he was in command of the U. S. S. Leviathan, which was a transport duty between New York and Brest in France.

GRASS FIRE PERILS TANK HOUSE SRUCTURE

A grass fire on the corner of Hilton and Laurel streets yesterday periled a tank house near that corner. The fire is thought to have been caused by boys playing with matches among the dry grass on the lot. The department responded to a call from box 236 and extingcished the fire before any damage had been done.

A second alarm was sent in during the afternoon from the same place.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR ADDITION TO HIGH SCHOOL

Bids To Be Asked For At Board Meeting To Be Held Today

WORK TO BE SPEEDED

New Rooms Needed To Care For Students

Work is to go ahead with all speed on the addition to the Sequoia Union High School for which bonds were voted by the people of the district last February. The preliminary details have been delayed by the serious illness of the architect, A. I. Coffey, who has been preparing the finished plans. These are now complete, however, and have been accepted by the board of trustees and approved by the state superintendent of public instruction.

It is the intention of the board of trustees of the school district to hold a meeting to day at which time an advertisement for bids will be prepared. It is intended to have the bids in the hands of the board for its consideration shortly after the first of August.

The bond issue which made these improvements possible was passed last February by a vote of 1127 for the bonds and 353 against them. A majority of more than three to one. The issue was for $250,000.

The improvements contemplated consist of buildng an annex in the rear of the present main bciding, which will enclose the rockery and tea garden in an inner court. This annex will take care of additional class rooms enough to make the capacity of the school 1500 pupils. Other contemplated improvements are: A building for music, orchestra and band pupils as well as the cafeteria, and a new girls' gymnasium, remodeling the present gymnasium for the sole use of the boys' physical education classes, and for remodeling and enlarging the present manual arts department.

The present building was erected five years ago to care for 650 pupils. The registration last year was almost 800, and is increasing every year. For this reason the board is anxious that the addition be completed at the earliest possible time.

At the meeting today the board will also purchase a new school bus to care for the pupils who come from distant sections of the district.

You Must Register Before July 28th

Have you registered this year?

July 28th is the last day to register for the August Primaries. In order to vote at the election on August 28th you must have registered since January 1st of this year. If you have moved since you registered, be sure to transfer your registration by July 28th.

The registration in Redwood City to date, according to County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese, is 3156 and the total registration for the county is 24,667. While this is an increase over the registration two years ago, County Clerk Kneese states that there are still many who have not yet registered. The populaion of the county has increased so greatly in the past two years, that the registration should hit the 30,000 mark before the end of the year in the estimation of County Clerk Kneese.

Registration deputies have been appointed throughout the county for the convenience of voters. Be sure you are properly registered in the precinct in which you are now living, on or before July 28.

Clubmen To Visit Boy Scout Camp

A party consisting of members of the Redwood City Kiwanis and Exchange clubs will motor to Memorial Park this afternoon to visit the summer camp of the Boy Scouts of America which is being held at that place. The invitation to the members of the two service clubs was issued this week by Bert Werder of this city, one of the leaders at the camp.

Similar visits have been made by the service clubs of other cities of the county. The boys plan an evening of fun and entertainment for the older men to follow a dinner to be served in the mess hall of the camp. The men wil leave here at four o'clock this afternoon. Those desirous of going should notify John E. Layng, president of the Kiwanis Club, who is making arrangements for ample transportation.

Zee Kiwannian, Zay Wear Zee Whiscare. Oui !Oui!

C'est tres bien ze whiscare. Oui, oui. So thought members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday. As the clubmen arrived for their weekly luncheon, Dan Stafford gave each a natty mustache and goatee in honor of the "French Fourth," the 14th of July. It was Dan's intention to make the boys look like Frenchmen. Some did. Others, though, looked like Abraham Lincoln, Bill Cody, Captain Kidd and other well-known personages. But all were so impressed with the improvement effected in their appearance by these becoming adornments that the intention was almost unanimous among the Kiwanians to blossom forth at the earliest opportunity with some home-grown facial appendages.

R. W. THOMPSON WITHDRAWS HIS FRANCHISE BID

Believes Other Interests Have Purchased Property

LAST OF PROJECTS

Thompson Appears In Person Before Board

The last of the requests for franchises for bridges across the bay from points in the vicinity of Hunter's Point near the San Mateo-San Francisco county line was declared officially dead this week after the petitioner, R. W. Thompson had asked that it be withdrawn. The franchise asked was one of four asked for similar bridges by different concerns, and was the last to be acted upon by the supervisors.

Last February Albert Mansfield of this city, representing other interests applied for a franchise for a bridge at this point, and would have received it had not the board reversed its opinion and denied the franchise at a second meeting. On Monday Thompson stated he was withdrawing his petition for a franchise as he had heard that Mansfield had purchased the land at the proposed bridge head. He stated that he believed that the owner of the land had a prior right, and that he did not want his franchise if granted, to be taken over by Mansfield.

Thompson's request for the withdrawal of his petition was granted upon a motion by Supervisor Brown, seconded by Supervisor Francis.

Emerald Lake Youth Shot Accidentally As Friend Views Gun

William Meaherin, 17, son of a prominent San Francisco business man living at Emerald Lake, was shot Welnesday, and is now in a sreious condition. The boy and and a friend, Frank Paulsen, were hunting in the hills near the lake when they were joined by Leonard Holt, son of Charles Holt of the real estate firm of Leonard & Holt.

Holt says he stopped his car and talked for awhile with the two other boys. Then noticing that Meaherin was carrying a new gun, asked to see it. He took the gun and while inspecting it, accidentally pulled the trigger. The bullett struck Meaherin in the abdomen, lodging in the bladder.

The wounded boy was rushed to the office of Dr. H. A. Clattenburg and later to St. Luke's hospital, where an operation was performed for the removal of the bullet.

The shooting was investigated by Deputy Sheriffs Joe Meeks and Belton Rhodes, and young Holt was questioned by Assistant District Attorney Edmund Scott.

Young Meaherin's father is a fire commissioner of San Francisco. He is a nephew of Eleanor Meaherin, writer of serial stories, who also maintains a summer home at Emerald Lake.

Two anglers were minus ten dollars each today as a result of a little fishing trip to La Honda. The fishermen were J. L. Heussman and L. Biglieri, had all the equipment necessary for a successful fishing trip, except the licenses. This slight oversight resulted in their being brought into the court of Justice of the Peace Edward McAuliffe in this city, where the extraction of the ten dollar fines were executed.

WESTERN PACIFIC TO CROSS BROADWAY AT ITS EXTENSION

Station May Be Located Near Business Zone Of Redwood City

RIGHTS OF WAY HELD

Speculation Rife As To Possibilities

The announcement of the intention of the Western Pacific Railway Co. to begin construction of a 26-mile line to connect this city with San Francisco in the immediate future resulted here in a storm of speculation as to where the route of the railway would approach this city and where the station would be located. D. R. Stafford, local realtor, who recently sold the Sweeny ranch east of town to a company of New York capitalsts, stated yesterday that the Western Pacific holds a right-of-way across his tract between the tracks of the Southern Pacific and the route of the Bay Shore highway.

Continued this right of way would cross the extension of Broadway, near the location of the Redwood City aviation field, and this is the most probable course of the railway, it is stated, as by a close approach to Redwood City at this point it will be possible to continue the line with a minimum of bridging.

The general route of the road was outlined in a statement issued yesterday by President A. H. Adams of the Western Pacific. He said:

"We already have a temporary freight terminal at Eighth and Brannan streets, connecting with our Twenty-fifth street slip. Beginning at the terminal our Redwood City line will follow south across Islais creek, swinging around and across the edge of Hunters Point and continuing in a southerly direction across the San Francisco-San Mateo county line and into South San Francisco.

"Thence, our line will continue in a southeasterly direction through Burlingame and San Mateo and the projected Port of San Francisco into Redwood City.

"For much of the distance we hug the shore and a large section of the route is through marshy land. This will call for much trestle work but the territory is essentially fitted for industrial sites and it can be only a matter of a short time before it is all filled in.

Laying Steel Immediate Job

"Bridge and terminal construction are not included in the $13,500,000 set aside for the railroad construction but our new subsidiary, the Western Pacific California Railroad Company. They will be provided for later. Our immediate big jobs are construction of the Redwood City line and our new line into Fresno and Bakersfield. Like the Western Pacific Railroad Company, our new subsidiary is a California corporation and its directors will meet in San Francisco. Both corporations will devote their resources and energies in the state to the upbuilding of Central California. They will serve directly no part of the State other than that tributary or adjacent to San Francisco, Oakland and the bay district.

It was also announced yesterday that the Western Pacific has already acquired a site for a passenger terminal in San Francsco at Eighth and Brannan streets.

The building of this line along the peninsula will break a monopoy which has been exercised by the Southern Pacific in the matter of rail transportation to San Francisco for many years. In regard to the rumored rail war which would result from this move on the part of the Western Pacific, President Adams is quoted as saying:

"The Southern Pacific activities are so widespread that any extension of transportation service in the state must necessarily involve some conflict of interest with that company. That circumstance and the priority in point of time of one or the other of the Southern Pacific's activities should not be permitted to prevent a legitimate expansion of other transportation agencies whereby such means alone a competitive service can be afforded and where the new service has marked superiority in many respects.

"No carrier, not even the Southern Pacific, has a vested right as against a new and improved transportation service, regardless of its priority or the value of its investments. Growth of the territory we serve can only be accelerated by enabling the Western Pacific to strengthen its resources by following up natural avenues for increasing traffic and by insisting on maintaining the principles of competition.

"Now that we are going into Bakersfield, there is a report that we intend to invade Los Angeles territory. That is quite improbable. We have not even thought of it."

The Western Pacific's projected San Joaquin valley line to Fresno will pass through the center of one of the most productive farming and dairy regions of the state. A region at present served by the so-called eastside and westside lines of the Southern Pacific. It is a district rich in perishable products and to which improved transportation is of utmost importance.

The constructon of a line connecting this city with this vast agricultural district together with the projected development of the harbor here is of vital significance, for properly developed the Redwood City harbor can easily become the outlet port for this entire inland district.

The following officers of the Western Pacific California Railroad Company, the new subsidiary were elected Wednesday afternoon: H. M. Adams, president; E. W. Mason, vice-president; Charles Elsey, treasurer; D. C. DeGraff, general auditor; W. G. Bruen, secretary; Judge F. M. Angellotti, general counsel.

Application for permission to launch the construction program was forwarded yesterday to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

NEW RAILROAD ON PENINSULA STATES PLANS

Western Pacific To Build Line from Redwood City To San Francisco

PLAN TERMINAL HERE

To Extend Lines To Bakersfield

One of the most important announcements to this district which has ever been made was made Tuesday when the Western Pacific Railroad Company announced that that company would construct a road from San Francisco to Redwood City, and would later extend it to Niles in Alameda county to connect with the present line of the company which will then be entended to Bakersfield.

The plan of the Western Pacific calls for the investment of $13,500,000 and will give that line an all-rail entrance into San Francisco, an advantage enjoyed at present by the Southern Pacific alone.

The plans which were announced by the company this week include:

Immediate construction of a line from a San Francisco terminal, down the peninsula to Redwood City. Ultimate extension of this line to Niles, Alameda county, for connection with the main line.

Immediate construction of a line from Nilegarden, on the Western Pacific main line, 11 miles southwest of Stockton, through the San Joaquin valley, to Kings river, via Fresno. Ultimate extension of this line from Kings river to Bakersfield.

Construction of a line by the Sacramento Sorthern Railway, another subsidiary, from a junction with the Holland branch to Ryde, in the southwestern part of Sacramento county.

Construction of a branch line from Brack, near Stockton, for a distance of three and a half miles east.

Preliminary plans call for the line to closely follow the bay bay shore, serving a section of the city along the waterfront from Islais Creek to Redwood City via South San Francisco, Burlingame and San Mateo. The exact route from Redwood City to Niles is not disclosed but it is expected to connect with the Western Pacific's line that now runs into San Jose.

It will also connect with the South San Francisco Belt Railway which serves the Union Stock Yards and packing houses in that territory.

The Western Pacific San Francisco lines now have a freight yard in the vicinity of the Twenty-fifth street docks and it is assumed that a connection will be built from there to some closer convenient location.

If permission is granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Redwood City-San Francisco line will be built immediately.

According to plans of the company, the San Francisco-Redwood City line will be twenty-five miles in length and will cost approximately $3,700,000. Officials of the company were not yet prepared to announce the exact location of the San Francisco terminal.

The connection from Redwood City to Niles, to give the all rail transcontinental route to San Francisco will be made shortly after the construction of the Redwood line. No definite plans have been announced for the exact route which will be followed by that line.

The line from Nilegarden to Kings River, via Fresno, thence to Bakersfield, involves an expenditure of approximately $8,500,000 and will be 138 miles in length. It will traverse the San Joaquin Valley east of the San Joaquin River and will enter the city of Fresno from the west.

No announcement has been made as to whether the connection between this city and Niles will be made over a bridge to be conconstructed by the Western Pacific or whether that line will use the one built by the Southern Pacific.

JURY DISAGREES IN FERANDO WINE TRIAL

A jury which heard evidence in the trial of Frank Ferando, who was charged with the illegal possession of liquor in the court of City Judge Albert Mansfield yesterday failed to come to a decision. The jury went into consultation shortly after one o'clock and remained out until nearly three o'clock. When it was found that no chance for an agreement existed at that time the jury was dismissed and the trial was re-set for next Thursday at one o'clock.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

War on California motorists who fail to place their license plates in a visible position was declared a few days ago by Frank G. Snook, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. State traffic officers were called upon for strict enforcement of the motor law section which forbids the obscuring of license plates and it was announced that persistent violators will be prosecuted.

Damage from fires, which got beyond the control of State crews, burning grass along the State highway, will be paid for by the State, according to the announcement of A. R. Herron, director of the State Department of Finance. Payment in three cases where such fires have invaded neighboring grain fields already has been ordered paid.

California concerns that contract to bury their clients in event of death and give perpetual care to their resting places are under the jurisdiction of the State Insurance Commission, it was ruled recently by the State attorney general's office. The attorney general held that such contracts, when executed prior to the client's death, are in effect insurance policies.

With 326 of State parks suggested, a majority of them in Southern California, Governor Young's park commission believes sentiment in favor of the $6,000,000 park bond issue to be voted upon next November sufficiently strong to insure passage of the issue by an overwhelming majority. The surveying is still continuing, and probably as many as 700 sites for preservation under the State system will have been suggested by election day. Inasmuch as most of the suggestions are coming from organizations rather than individuals, their number can be considered a barometer of interest, according to Fred G. Stevenot, director of natural resources.

Crowded conditions at the State hospitals for mentally diseased, reported to Governor Young by Earl E. Jensen, director of institutions, presented one of the problems to be considered in preparation of the next administration budget. The six mental hospitals now are housing 13,337 patients, or 1,630 more than capacity, Jensen said. There is room for further expansion, however, and a building program is hoped for, he said, which will ultimately bring each of the six institutions to a maximum population of 3,000. That maximum will be reached by 1935, Jensen estimated, necessitating a new State hospital. Southern California, he said, particularly needed an additional institution.

A score of persons were injured, two seriously, when the Southern Pacific's Shoreline Limited crashed into a freight train in the Bayshore Yards, South of San Francisco. Slight hope was held for the recovery of the engineer and fireman, both badly scalded. Others of the train crew and passengers were treated for burns and bruises at the scene of the accident. The train was heavily loaded with holiday travelers. It left San Francisco at 8 a. m. Many of the passengers were at breakfast and were tumbled into the aisles amid broken dishes. A panic was narrowly averted by quick action of the train crew who succeeded in quieting the hysterical passengers.

Faced with the industrial maxim that "youth must be served," middle-aged workers in some parts of California are dyeing their hair to hold their jobs. This was disclosed by Will J. French, State director of industrial relations, in an attack last week on "the growing tendency to keep lowering age limits for those in or seeking employment." He reported the problem to Gov. C. C. Young. The policy of naming a maximum age—say 35 years—for prospective employes is "anti-social," French declared. "Some wage earners," he said, "are known to be adopting what has usually been considered an exclusively feminine line of defense, so that premature or otherwise gray hairs will be discernible.

Wealth per pupil in the elementary schools of the San Francisco Bay area is above the $12,000 mark in each of the nine principal cities. Comparing true wealth in each community with average daily attendance records in the schools the State Department of Education made that assertion last week. Average wealth back of each student in grammar grades was listed as follows: San Francisco, $34,266; Alameda, $15,275; Berkeley, $19,798; Piedmont, $32,046; Richmond, $20,725; Salinas, $12,967; San Jose, $17,055; True wealth standing behind every boy and girl in high schools of the same nine cities was also estimated: San Francisco, $114,667; Alameda, $37,666; Berkeley, $40,192; Oakland, $54,595; Palo Alto, $40,711; Piedmont, $42,379; Richmond, $82,861; Salinas, $66,836; San Jose, $33,904.

The demand for babies to adopt in California during the past year was far in excess of the supply, and as a result 421 couples were unable to find orphans to take into their homes. These facts were revealed a few days ago in a report of the Native Sons and Daughters' central committee on homeless children, dealing with the fiscal year ending April 1st. The report set forth that 621 homes sought to adopt children, but only 200 orphans were available. Prior to April, 1927, the report revealed, 6,903 homes had been offered for homeless children, while altogether 2,390 orphans were adopted.

With battles on in sixty-eight districts, Secretary of State Frank C. Jordon a few days ago announced the list of qualified of Senate and Assembly candidates for the August primary election. The tabulation shows 12 contests in the twenty districts where Senators are to be elected this year. Close races are also indicated in 56 of the 80 assembly districts. Only one woman is trying for a seat in the Senate, Mrs. Leola May Buck of Lincoln, opposed by three men, all seeking to toga of the retiring veteran Senator, Thomas Ingraham of Grass Valley.

California total estimated daily average crude oil production fell off 3,500 barrels during the week ended June 30, figures released by the American Petroleum Institute show. The total estimated daily average crude oil production for the week of the report was 642,000 barrels as against 645,500 barrels for the preceding week.

State Corporation Commissioner J. M. Friedlander has been selected president of the western division of the National Association of Securities Commissioners, and the next convention will be held in San Francisco, according to word from a Seattle meeting of the organization held last week. Howard C. Ellis of San Francisco, assistant State commissioner, was elected association secretary.

There are more than 250,000 big game animals in the eighteen national forests of California. This is according to the 1927 census of wild life taken by rangers of the United States Forest Service and just released by S. B. Show, chief of the California district. The census shows that there are 121,700 blacktail deer, 117,000 mule deer, 10,300 black and brown bears, 680 mountain sheep and 125 elk in the federal forests of the State.

Firemen on the Sacramento division of the Southern Pacific will receive $25,000 in back pay as the result of a settlement reached in Chicago between the roads and the Brotherhood of Firemen and Locomotive Engineers, A. A. Hern, assistant general manager of the company, announced last week. An increase of 6½ per cent in pay has been agreed to, effective as of August 1, last. A similar increase for the engineers of the devision will be effective from May 1, last.

"All steel" railroad trains on California roads will be all in reality within three years if a campaign undertaken last week by the transportation division of the Railroad Commission proves effective. In letters addressed to railroads operating throughout the State the commission asked that buffet and day-coaches of wood be replaced as soon as possible. The three-year limit was placed on replacements. The request for abandonment of wooden cars is a result of several years of study of transportation accidents.

This story may sound "fishy," but the "top minnow" actually has come out on top in its fight on California malaria. The "top minnow," or scientifically speaking, the "gambusia affinis," was imported to California from Texas several years ago and has been waging a relentless war on mosquito larvae ever since. Last week the State Department of Public Health announced: That 121 persons died of malaria in California during 1911. That there were only 15 deaths during 1927.

San Miguel Mission, founded in 1797, and Mission San Antonio, founded in 1771, this week go back into the hands of those that built them—the Franciscan Fathers. For the first time in 87 years the Franciscans will have full control of the historic structures made possible by them, and they are preparing to try and finance the restoration of the two missions that lie between Santa Barbara and Paso Robles, it was stated. Mission San Miguel is in a good state of preservation and is the only old California mission where the original mural decorations have been preserved. Mission San Antonio, 40 miles northwest of it, is in considerable disrepair and much money will be needed, the Franciscan Fathers say, to properly restore it.

The roar of millions of automobiles that streak over summer highways has a distinct echo in the petroleum industry in California, a government report of oil conditions for May, issued recently, discloses. In the face of a general decline in petroleum refinery activities that resulted in an average decrease of 15,502 barrels a day of crude oil in still runs, the production of gasoline increased 263,643 barrels and totaled 5,159,095 for the month. One of the factors contributing to the high figure for May was in increased production from natural-gas gasoline plants, which showed a recovery of 644 barrels daily greater than that of April.

National forest roads in California will be improved in the amount of $1,112,155, following the authorization of congress for continuance of the national forest roads and trails, reports the California State Automobile Association. In addition to this sum approximately $2,500,000 is available from federal sources for expenditure by the State on the federal aid system. Of the forest road money, $671,088 will be expended on major roads wthin or serving the national forests and of primary importance to the State, counties or communities. The remaining forest road money, $441,067, will be spent on minor roads and trails of primary importance for the protection and administration of forest resources. Approximately $115,000, or 10 per cent of the receipts from the national forests of California also will be available for improvement of forest roads and trails.

Blaming man-caused fires of wanton destruction of fish and game, former Governor George C. Pardee, chairman of the State Board of Forestry, last week called upon California sportsmen to cooperate with the State in protection of wild life as well as timber resources. Heavy toll has already been taken this year by fires sweeping through the breeding places of game and bird, said Dr. Pardee. In San Luis Obispo County alone, 100 deer, 2,000 quail and more than 2,000 rabbits were reported killed in a single conflagration.

Overtaken by the one thing he feared, Jay Bruce, State lion hunter, has apparently lost the sight of one eye and must, for a time at least, give up the chase that has made him famous throughout the West. This picturesque mountaineer was pursuing his 339th lion when the accident occurred. Although the blow from a limb had blinded his left eye, Bruce continued the chase and killed the lion. Then, very weak, he gave up, allowing his son, who had taken part in the hunt, to skin the animal and carry out the hide.

POULTRY

GRAIN AND MASH BEST FOR CHICKS

The Cornell poultry department advocates a combination of scratch grain and mash for feeding young chickens.

During the first four to six weeks, any time between eight and ten o'clock each morning, chicks should be fed enough dry mash to last them until late in the afternoon. Grain should be put before them in the middle of the afternoon, depending on the amount of mash they eat. Both grain and mash should be fed in shallow boxes or troughs.

The grain mixture for this period consists of 40 pounds of cracked wheat and 60 pounds of fine cracked corn. The mash mixture consists of 30 pounds yellow cornmeal, 20 of wheat bran, 15 of flour wheat middlings, 10 of fine ground heavy oats or oat flour, 10 of fine ground meat scrap, 5 of bone meal, 10 of dry milk products, and one-half pound of salt.

For the first four to six weeks, the mash is usually left before the chicks until the grain is fed and the grain is left before them until the mash is fed the following day.

Liquid skim milk is recommended in place of water during the first week. Fine oyster shell may be fed if desired in separate dishes or on the floor. Grit or charcoal are not necessary but may be fed the same as oyster shell.

If liquid skim milk or buttermilk is available as a drink, the dry milk products recommended in the mash mixture should be omitted. If reground heavy oats cannot be obtained for the mash, the cornmeal may be increased from 30 pounds to 40 pounds.

For chicks from six to twelve weeks old a grain mixture consisting of 60 pounds cracked corn and 40 pounds whole wheat is recommended. From twelve weeks to maturity 200 pounds cracked corn, 200 pounds whole wheat and 100 pounds heavy oats are recommended. The same mash mixture as the one on which the chicks are started should be used throughout.

During the first six weeks the chicks should be fed more mash than grain. The second six weeks they should have about equal amounts of mash and grain, and after that more grain than mash.

Spray Solution Kills Mites in Hot Weather

Poultry mites make their first bid for fresh chicken meat in early summer. Sometimes they take the eggs also, or it seems that way because nobody else gets any eggs when they are present in large numbers.

Mites hide in the cracks and crevices of roosts and walls, but do not stay long on the bodies of the fowls. That is different than with lice, which stay on the bodies.

To keep down mites it is best to spray the house before they appear, very thoroughly. Don't wait until the chickens are restless and feverish at night with the attacks of these parasites. Don't presume that your house is clean because it used to be.

Spray well with one gallon of kerosene, one gallon of crude oil or worn-out crank-case oil, four ounces of crude carbolic acid and a half pint of any cresol solution, sheep dip or creolin. Repeat the dose in a few days, and put it on with force enough to reach the hidden places. This solution is a good disinfectant.

Poultry Facts

A box of crushed oyster shell should always be within reach.

* * *

The hen needs a balanced ration, the same as the cow or the man.

* * *

Examine all feed by sight, taste and smell before giving it to baby chicks.

* * *

More little chickens are killed by overfeeding with damp, mushy food than in any other way.

* * *

The roosts should be low, especially for large, heavy fowls, and they should all be of the same height.

* * *

It is said that if alfalfa hay is used for hens' nests and scattered around the chicken coops the chicken mites will beat a hasty retreat.

* * *

Do not go into the poultry business. Grow into it. Start on a small scale and learn the details of the business before you put much capital into it.

* * *

Turkeys, whether sold for breeders at a fancy price or sold to the merchant for Thanksgiving or Christmas trade, should have some special care along about the first of October.

* * *

Eggs may be set after the males have been with the females a week or ten days.

* * *

If one is to market cockerels from the early hatches as broilers they should be placed upon the market as early as possible.

* * *

That the addition of milk to the regular grain ration of growing chicks leads to a greatly increased rate of growth is a conclusion reached by poultry specialists who have studied the matter experimentaly.

* * *

It has been found that crooked breast may be prevented by feeding the birds plenty of minerals. Where there is a deficiency in minerals steam bone meal usually is added to the ration to prevent crooked breast.

* * *

Let your chicken house be roomy, clean, dry and well lighted, yet free from drafts. Have the walls as smooth as possible, so as to be easily whitewashed. Let the floor be of gravel or cinders, covered with a deep litter of straw.

First Aid to Tired Memories

By RING LARDNER

To the Editor:

I suppose that they's a great many amongst your readers and a specially the older ones, that find themselfs all the time forgetting things that they should ought to remember and I was the same way myself and one of my friends suggested that I take one of these here memory courses witch he said had helped him a whole lot but I said what is the use of my paying money for a memory course when I can probably get one up for myself that's just as good and maybe a whole lot better so I set down and figured out a system of how to remember different things, and now I am going to pass the good news on to my admires and the differents between the other memory courses and I is because I don't charge anything for my lessons but all as you half to do is send in a stamp self addressed envelope so I won't forget where you live at, and I will tell you the complete system but in the first place I will give you a few examples of how the system worked with me and you can judge for yourself if it's O. K. or the opp.

Well, to begin at the beginning, the first time I felt like my memory was slipping was about 2 mos. ago when I was out on the golf linx with a couple of friends and we was playing for a berry a hole and along about the 3rd hole one of my friends said he had a six and the other said he had a seven so they asked me what I had and I said a five.

"Listen," said my 2nd friend, "how about them two times in the ploughed ground when you swang and never hit the ball at all."

So that set me thinking that I had entirely forgot them two whiffs, so I kind of laughed to cover up my embarrassments but I made up my mind right there that I would find out some way to remember them missed swings a specially when the boys was keeping such close tabs on a person, so that night I remembered to go home and after dinner I worked out a system and the next morning I tried it in the nursery and all four of my kids was in there to say nothing about the nurse and without consulting no notes I called them each by their first name.

"Well," I said to myself, "this system looks like it was A-1 and I would be a fine stiff if I didn't pass it on to my friends that's inflicted the same way."

So then I used the new system to try and think of some of my friends that had forgot different things, and the 1st one I thought of was a bird that him and I had been to N. Y. City a couple of mos. before and had dinner and at that time he said let's make it Dutch, so I said all right, but when the check came around he said he was busy trying to get the maple syrup off his hands into the finger bowl, so in this letter I kind of reminded him about the Dutch laws and sure enough in a few days I got a letter enclosing 70 cts. in stamps witch was his share of the orgy.

So then I happened to think of another old pal that couldn't never remember he was married and his wife had complained about it several times, so one night we was over to his house but he was not home but his Mrs. thought she knew where she could reach him by telephone so I called him on the wire and told him to not forget he was married and the next night he come home and called his wife by her first name, witch is more than she could do to him as she didn't even answer him.

Personly I could give you other proofs about how this system works, for instants, I can set down right this minute and without going into no newspaper files or calling up no sporting editors I can tell who won between Dempsey and Tunney at Chicago last September or won the world's serions last October and I can tell if Babe Ruth swings right or left handed and I can remember what year I was married, and why, and I can recall the name of the school I went one semester to before they decided that 2 semesters was 1 too much, and etc.

Where this system comes in as handy as any other place is when a man is dressing. For instants, how many of you gents puts on your collar only to find that your shirt is off, or dons your shoes and then recalls that the hosiery is missing? Since I got up this system I can always manage to get my garments onto me as they should come and at 1st I tried to do it in alphabet order but I soon found out that I hadn't no sooner had gotten my trousers on when I noticed that the underwear was yet to come and the coat had been on a long while before it had come time for the vest. But the way I overcome these difficulties was to make up my mind to discard the vest and then do the rest of it from omega to alpha instead of vice versa. So then when I don the old costume, the underwear comes first and then the trousers and then the sox and shoes and shirt and necktie and finely wind up with the coat which is just as it should be.

This is only a example to show you how good the system works and it don't stop with dressing but gos on through a man's daily life and as I say I will pass it on to my admires if they will send me a stamp addressed envelope but no money and if they are satisfied with the course they can maybe come acrost with a few flowers or a ½ dozen doughnuts.

The Individual Must Remain Paramount

THE open secret of the greatness of America is expressed perfectly at the end of Lincoln's famous Gettysburgh address—"Government of the people, by the people, for the people . . . ."

At the basis of all we have done, all our achievements and prosperity, is that definite principle of government.

In the beginning the United States was created by men to whom monarchy, the Devine Right of Kings, all the freedom-stifling autocracy of the Europe of that time, was abominable.

They established a great country on the doctrine that the people were entitled to freedom, liberty and the right to organize their own government and society.

The iron heel of Imperialism was abolisned and the great experiment, Democracy, became a reality.

The qualities which had lain dormant in a subjugated people—adventurousness, vision, the urge to progress and invent and perfect—came splendidly to life. With magnificent energy and intelligence a comparative handful of citizens set themselves to the grim reality of developing a great country whose possibilities, resources and even physical boundaries and characteristics, were but vaguely understood.

A little more than 150 years later, we are the heirs of their herculean accomplishments. All their dreams, aspirations and triumphs have been given to us.

It is our place—our duty—to see that our inheritance is carried on toward that ultimate perfection they envisaged.

The past greatness of America, the past accomplishments, came from unhampered individualism that used its intelligence and initiative for the benefit of the people as a whole, with the assistnce of a government that was the true voice of people.

The future achievements and yet unconceived greatness of America must stand on the same basis—freedom of the individual to progress and realize to the limit his possibilities. Only with doctrine uppermost, can industrial and business greatness be created and maintained.

There must be no departure from government of, by and for the people. There is no place in this country for paternalism or radicalism. The individual must remain paramount or we have failed.

Noise, a Public Menace

MORE and more people are coming to realize that not only must the public demand protection from the forces which offend the sight and nose, but that in sound, a matter heretofore given little attention, is a menace as great to the common good as in the smoke which offends the smell in the large cities.

The constant clang of traffic, the blare of motor horns, the clatter of the elevated and the boom of subways is having effects upon the metropolitan citizen quite as pronounced as did the constant explosion of shells have upon the soldier in the trenches.

Many cities have ruled against the use of auto horns except as a warning signal. It is a good thing and a move which all cities might well adopt. The chap who drives up in front of your neighbor's house and instead of going to the door, sits and schreeches a maddening horn is too well known to need to be mentioned by name, and the names which he is called are not generally included in editorials.

Then, too, a movement is on foot to have the pneumatic riviter banished from buildings under construction in closely occupied sections and electric welding used in its place. The American public is just beginning to awake to the effects upon its nerves caused by noise. When it becomes fully awake to the extent to which its nerve strain is caused by unnecessary noises the din of the city may be replaced by quiet which at present makes the open country such a welcome and restful place for the nerve-worn city dweller.

The World Grows Smaller

IT is not so many years ago that a vacation consisted of hitching the old horse to the surrey and driving out of the hurry and flurry of the city to Aunt Susie's or Cousin Luke's farm to spend a week or two. In those days a trip to the Yosemite valley was an event of a lifetime. The globe-trotter who had been to Europe was the envy of his friends for the rest of his life.

Today things have changed. We noticed an advertisement in a magazine the other day headed, "Spend Your Vacation in Chosen" which outlined the beauties of the mountains of Korea. Another pointed out the advantages of Scotland as a place for spending a vacation, while yet another held forth to the expectant vacationer the lure of a caravan trip across the Sahara.

This is the result of a rapid transportation. A generation ago a trip from England to California was a matter of months. Today the same dstance can be covered in a little over a week.

Within the next ten years we believe we will be reading ads such as: "Spend Your Week Ends at Kamschatka;" "Enjoy the Holidays at Cape Colony."

With travel advanced as much within the next generation as it has been since the last there is no telling to what ends of the earth we may go for a two-day trip; or perhaps we may quit work a little early in San Francisco in order to get in a few holes of golf on the Welsh courses before going to dinner at a cafe on the Bund at Shanghai.

$10,355 IN DAIRY PREMIUMS AT STATE FAIR

With $10,355 offered as premiums, the dairy cattle and dairy products department of the California State Fair will be an outstanding feature of the exposition, September 1st to 8th.

Of the premium money, $7,650 is to be awarded in the open classes for Holstein-Friesian, Jerseys, Guernseys, Ayrshires and Milking Shorthorns—$1,530 in each division. The Holstein-Friesian Association of America is making a special offer of $290 and the American Shorthorn Breeders Association $382.50 in addition to the State Fair money.

Community Herds

For community herds, $250 will be given by the state in each of the five classifications. The community herd feature was inaugurated last year and is expected to attract a number of entries by community breeders associations, county farm bureaus and similar groups.

The Brown Swiss classification has been dropped from the premium list this year because of scarcity of entries at recent state fairs

Junior Division

In the Junior Division, open to boys' and girl's clubs, students of vocational agriculture or members of regular high school classes in agriculture, $693 is offered in premiums for Holsteins, Jerseys and Guernseys. Gold medals will also be awarded for the champion bull and champion heifer in each classification.

Dairy Products

Cash premiums in the dairy products department total $1,090 this year. The classes are the same as at last year's fair with two exceptions: A cottage cheese class with $100 in premium money and a gold medal has been added, and the milk dealers class has been eliminated.

Green in Charge

Sam H. Green, secretary-manager of the California Dairy Council and a member of the State Agricultural Society Board will be director in charge of the dairy department. He will be assisted by F. H. Abbott of the Dairy Industry Division of the University of California.

$50,000 Demanded For Rancher's Death On Coastside Road

Suit for $50,000 damage was filed in the superior court here this week by heirs of Antone L. Bello, well-known rancher of Halfmoon Bay, who was killed on the highway near his home when struck by an automobile. The defendants in the action are L. B. Aranguena and Hyanthia B. Lindsay. Bello was struck June 26. The driver of the car is said to have been Aranguena. Miss Lindsay was with him at the time. The driver of the car failed to stop after striking the aged rancher, but traffa officers found it wrecked two miles north of the scene of the accident, where the driver had run over the bank. Miss Lindsay stated that she tried to make Aranguena stop and finally pulled o nthe wheel, wrecking the car.

Arthur Provost, a carpenter of Arch street, was struck in the eye by a knot from a board on which he was working four weeks ago. He has been continuously under the care of Dr. Black of Palo Alto since that time and on Sunday was removed to Lane hospital in San Francisco for treatment. He is reported to be recovering from the injury, and his sight which it was feared he might lose, will be saved.

AMERICAN LEGION MAY ASK SECOND VET. BOND ISSUE

10,000 Men Still To Be Cared For On Home Purchase Plan

SCORES IN COUNTY

Funds For Loans To Veterans Used

By CLEM WHITAKER
Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, July 12—San Mateo county probably will receive an additional investment in veterans' farms and homes of at least $400,000 in the event a new $20,000,000 bond issue is floated to complete the state program, as planned by the American Legion, it was announced today.

This estimate is predicated on the coenty's pro rata of the first $20,000,000 invested, which totaled $398,150 in homes. No farms have yet been purchased for veterans in the county.

Decision on whether a new bond issue will be requested is scheduled to be reached by the American Legion at its annual state convention. The veterans will hold their meeting in Stockton during the second week in August.

More than 10,000 service men will still be on the waiting list for homes and farms when the present funds are exhausted the end of this year, it is stated by the state board.

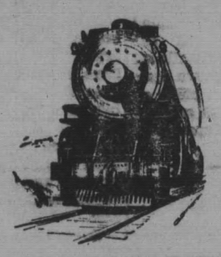

Under the program, service men are allowed loans of not more than $5,000 to buy homes, or $7500 to buy farms, the money being repaid over a period of twenty years in small monthly installments.

The state merely extends its credit to finance the project, as the bonds are retired and all interest and redemption costs met from the payments made by the successful veteran applicants.

Scores of service men in Redwood City, South San Francisco, San Mateo and other communities of the county still have applications pending before the state state board and many of these would come under the new bond issue, it is announced.

S. F. Water Fight Backed By Board Of Supervisors

The fight which San Francisco is making to maintain its water supply in a clean and uncontaminated condition this week received the backing of the San Mateo county board of supervisors. The resolution was in protest to the proposal of the National Park Service to open the Hetch Hetchy lake and water shed to campers and boating parties.

San Mateo county and Santa Clara counties have joined forces with San Francisco to checkmate this move. Copies of the resolution will be sent to the president of the United States, to the director of national parks, and to secretary of the interior. The resolution was proposed by Supervisor Hickey. It reads:

"No person shall bathe, wash clothes or cooking utensils, or water stock in, or in any way polute the waters within the limits of the Hetch Hetchy reservoir or any reservoir constructed by the said grantee under the provisions of this grant, or in the streams leading thereto within one mile of said reservoid; or, with reference to the Hetch Hetchy reservoir, in the waters from the reservoir, or waters entering the river between it and the 'early intake' of the aqueduct, pending the completion of the aqueduct between 'early intake' and the Hetch Hetchy dam ..."

Father Ryan Leaves For S. F. Parish

Father P. Ryan, the assistant pastor of Mount Carmel church for the past three years, left during the week for his new field of endeavor at St. Elizabeth's parish in San Francisco, to which charge he was appointed recently by Archbishop E. J. Hanna. Many regrets are expressed by his friends at his departure from this community in which he was universally esteemed and admired by all. He is succeeded by Father Flanningan of San Francisco.

Wednesday night in the Mount Carmel Men's club rooms, Father Ryan was given a farewell reception by his parishioners and friends. The whole affair was a surprise to the popular assistant pastor. He came into the hall accompanied by Father Kavanaugh. At once D. R. Stafford, chairman of the evening, stepped forward and in a neat address, well phrased, presented the young priest with a well-filled purse as a token of the esteem of the people of Redwood City. Father Ryan was visibly overcome but responded appropriately and thanked his friends for the gift. Miss Rasmussen presented in a few well-chosen words Father Ryan with a fountain pen and a lead pencil set on behalf of the Young Ladies Institute. Father Kavanaugh spoke highly of his assistant, telling of the pleasant associations that existed between him and his assistant and predicting success for Father Ryan in San Francisco.

About three hundred were in attendance, all giving vent to their regrets in losing Father Ryan from the office of Sheriff J. J. Mcfor the past three years.

Two Hit-Runners Kill S. F. Youth

The body of a boy later identified as Harold Harvey, living at 583 Grove street, San Francisco, was picked up on the highway, near Colma, after having been crushed beneath the wheels of two speeding cars which failed to stop. Mike Pollsi, a rancher of Sunnyvale, who was driving his truck into San Francisco shortly before midnight Tuesday ran over something in the road. He stopped to investigate and found it to be a crushed bicycle. A little farther on he saw the body of a boy about 14 years old.

Pollsi took the body into his truck and rushed to St. Luke's hospital in San Francisco. But here it was found that the boy was too badly injured to be saved and he passed away before anything could be done for him.

Several witnesses to the accident were found by Constable S. A. Landini, but none who could give a description of the cars who struck the boy. One of the cars is said to have knocked the lad from his bicycle and to have passed over his body. Another car directly behind it also passed over the boy's body without even slackening speed.

Pollsi was at first placed under arrest by Constable Landini, but was released when witnesses told of having seen two machines ahead of the truck strike the boy.

Wright Act Costs Man Heavy Fine

Violating the Wright Act cost Jack Mills, a barber of Belmont $500 in the court of Justice of the Peace McAuliffe this week, Mills was arrested at Belmont by deputies from the office of Sheriff J. J. McGrath. Mills also paid a fine of $100 for operating a slot machine.

Telephone Service Reaches New "Farthest North"

Telephone connection for American subscribers will reach a new "farthest north" with the extension of transatlantic telephone service to Oslo, Norway, on Friday, July 6th. it was announced this week by The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. The Norwegian capital which has figured prominently in organizing relief expeditions for Nobile and Amundsen is itself only 30 degrees from the North Pole in a corresponding latitude to the upper part of Hudson Bay in North America.

The hours of service will include the period from 2:30 a. m. to 6 p. m. Pacific Standard Time, which will correspond to 11:30 a. m. to 3 a. m. in Norway. The city of Oslo with a population of 250,000 has a remarkably high development of 43,000 telephones or over 17 per 100 population. Its distance from London by telephone line is approximately 1,400 miles, the route passing Holland, Germany and Sweden.

With the innclusion of Oslo for transatlantic service, telephone calls may be placed from the United States, Cuba and the principal cities of Canada and Mexico to all three Scandinavian countries, service having been previously extended to Stockholm and Gothenburg, Sweden, early this year, and to Copenhagen, Denmark, and Malmo, Sweden, within the past week.

Bids Called For Grading Section Of Bayshore Highway

Bids for grading and paving the section of the Bayshore road between South San Francisco and San Francisco were called for this week by the state division of highways at Sacramento. The bids will be opened August 1st.

The section to be improved consists of 3 1-2 miles of highway in this county which will be paved with a crushed rock and oil surface.

On his arrival in San Francisco, July 20, Herbert Hoover, the Republican standard bearer, will motor from the city to his home on the Stanford campus. He will pass through Redwood City, heading a caravan of friends and admirers in machines. Palo Alto is making elaborate preparations for the home-coming of the next president of the United States.

It will be a gala day for that city and well it might be, for the nomination and election of the noted food administrator will bring the college city into prominence. It behooves the people of Redwood City to be up and doing. All the street flags should be put in place, the business houses decorated and the large flag at the courthouse thrown to the breezes in honor of the noted citizen. The Republican County Committee will no doubt be called Hoover's trip through the county.

Senator M. B. Johnson was here on Monday greeting friends and incidentally campaigning for reelection. Mr. Johnson has made a good senator and deserves well at the hands of the voter. He intends to make a strong campaign in Santa Cruz county. The senatorial district consists of Santa Cruz county, with a vote of 15,000, San Benito county, 4500 votes and San Mateo county with a vote of 25,000. It will readily be seen that the battleground is to be in this county.

Plan Extension of Serra Boulevard To This County

The proposed extension of Junepero Serra boulevard into San Mateo county from San Francisco was given a short discussion by the board of supervisors of this county Monday. Because of the absence from the board of Supervisor Hickey, one of the directors of the joint district contemplating the work, the matter was laid over.

It is proposed to extend this artery to connect with the present highway in this county and furnish another means of egress from San Francisco. The project is planned to be financed by a joint highway district composed of the counties of San Francisco and San Mateo. The cost would be born by the two counties in a ration of 85 and 15 percent, respectively.

RECKLESS DRIVER GETS STIFF SENTENCE

Reckless driving will result in F. R. Prince of San Francisco spending 20 days in San Mateo county's jail. He was sentenced to spend that many days in jail when he appeared before Justice of the Peace E. I. McAuliffe Wednesday on the reckless driving charge.

Prince was arrested by Traffic Officer Bond and Constable Wallace Tuesday and charged with driving while drunk. The charge was later reduced to one of reckless driving in order that the case might be heard in the lower court. Witnesses claimed that Prince had driven his machine from San Francisco as far as Beresford at a speed of 53 miles an hour, and had crowded many machines off the road. "The only reason he was not wrecked," said Judge McAuliffe yesterday, "is because he was lucky."

Coroner's Jury Asks Gates for Highway Crossing at Broadway

The increase of traffic over the railroad crossing at Broadway in North Burlingame has become so great since the Bay Shore road has been finished and opened as far as that point that greater protection will be required for the crossing. The installation of gates at this point was recommended by a coroner's jury which investigated the death of two persons at this crossing Sunday.

The deaths were those of Milton T. Gill, civil engineer of San Francisco and Miss Nolia Bratten of Oakland. The car driven by Gill and in which Miss Bratten was a passenger, was crashed into by a Southern Pacific train as it was crossing at Broadway.

The jury exonerated the railway company and the train crew for the accident, but recommended greater protection at the crossing than is afforded by the wig-wag signal now in use.

Exchange Club Men Told of Plans for Redwood City Harbor

The development of the Redwood City harbor was the subject of a talk given before members of the Redwood City Exchange Club Tuesday evening by Elmore B. Hinman, president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce. Hinman sketched briefly the steps, which have been taken looking toward the development of the inherent possibilities of this district as a shipping and industrial center, and told of the plans which are now on foot for that development.

Hinman urged the members of the club to back this development in every way possible. A resolution endorsing the action by the city council in beginning action to place before the people of Redwood City a bond issue for the purchase of 25 acres of land on Redwood Creek and for the development of a municipal wharf was passed by the club.

The chairman of the meeting was Colon Stokes.

Tomorrow evening a ladies night will be held at the Emerald Lake Country Club. The arrangements for the dinner and dance which will follow have been made by Percy Long and Jack Fox.

Distribution Without Waste

Waste is a Thief!

It has been said that waste in distribution annually costs the people of the United States more than it costs to run the government. Those responsible for this statement undoubtedly had in mind "ordinary" methods of distribution. With Safeway it is different. This organization is dedicated to its motto "Distribution Without Waste" and most of our profits are made from what is wasted by old methods of distribution. This accounts for the greater values you always find at Safeway.

MENLO PARK

The town council met in regular session Tuesday evening, all members being present. The regular order of business was suspended to take up the matter of the annexation of Menlo Oaks. Timothy Hopkins was present to protest the action of the people of Menlo Oaks.

In order to annex the proposed territory it is necessary to also take in the estate of Mr. Hopkins, which lies between the territory and Menlo Park, being contiguous property. City Attorney Whitworth explained modes operandi in taking in the new section, saying that the council had no alternative but receive the petition, properly signed and call an election. "The object in having Mr. Hopkins present," said the attorney was to sound out the sentiment and hear the objections. Mr. Hopkins explained that he had nothing but the friendliest feeling for the proponents of the question but that he felt that he could no acquies as incorporation would be of no benefit to him and he could not see his way clear to come into the city. The question as to his attitude in giving a strip of land through his property to permit the annexationists to come into Menlo Park he still refused to give his permission, saying that by giving the proposed strip he would be clouding the title to the land.

L. T. Diebles, representing 125 families residing in Menlo Oaks, declared that his section was made up of beautiful homes that were suffering by the encroachment of shacks. His community sought relief by annexation to some municipality, Atherton gave it a deaf ear and that Menlo Park was willing to take it in but the only stumbling block was the Hopkins estate. He could not see why one man could prevent the benefit of incorporation coming to 125 people to make them happy and their community prosperous and in polite language told is hearers that if Mr. Hopkins would not consent, to come in, the people would take action to include him.

Engineer McCaffery, assistant engineer of the State Railroad Commission, living in that locality, also spoke along similar lines, daying before the council the necessity of annexation. The council took no action on the matter. It is understood that the people of Menlo Oaks will present a petition at the next meeting of board asking that an election be called to annex the proposed territory.

C. Haslett communicated with the council offering an 18-foot strip of land on Fremont avenue as a right of way for the extension of the street if the council would extend the street through Florence Lane to University Drive. Action on the communication was continued.

Street Commissioner A. Walker reported that Mr. Buckman was not putting in the proper foundation for his super station on Valparais avenue. Walker agreed to make a further report at the next meeting.

On motion of Blake, seconded by Ellis, Engineer Armstrong was appointed at a fee of $100 to assist the city attorney in securing data in te matter of he Bear Gulch Water Company's application for a raise of rates, which application is before the State Railroad Commission.

City Treasurer Ryan reported the condition of the funds as follows: Balance on June 1, $1,-558.72; receipts for June, $3,-145.60; total $4,704.32; disbursements, $678.50; balance July 1, $4,025.82.

Chief of Police Furman reported as follows:

Collection of business licenses for April, May and June, $991.41, dog licenses, $14, total, $1,005.41. Number of arrests for second quarter 69 motor vehicle violations and fines $240, other violations, fines $2700, total fines of $2940; grand total of $3945.41.

As this is the time to fix the budget the council agreed to meet Saturday moring to work on the big job.

The council then introduced several ordinances that will be passed at the next meeting. One of the ordinances will prevent the carrying of fire arms within the city limits, another prevents the sale of firecrackers and still another stops the loitering of boys on the street corners after 8 o'clock.

F. W. Johnson, secretary,treasurer of the Planning Commission asked the council for an appropriation of $100 to assist in paying the expert employed by the commission in making maps. The request was granted upon motion o Walker, seconded by Blake.

The council adjourned to meet on July 17.

Redwood City, the Sea Port of Santa Clara Valley . .

In the same manner as SACRAMENTO is the natural shipping point for the Sacramento Valley, in the same manner as STOCKTON is the natural shipping point for the San Joaquin Valley, REDWOOD CITY is the natural shipping point for the Santa Clara valley.

We have an added advantage over the other two shipping centers in that our harbor is situated in San Francisco harbor and has natural deep water frontage with spur track connections.

The announcement of the Western Pacific Railroad that they will build from Redwood City to San Francisco, giving Redwood City the commanding situation of the Peninsula, simple means that Redwood City's future prosperity is assured.

No one can go wrong in getting in contact with the people who are responsible in a great measure for this announcement, and who are spending their own money in laying down development work that spells Redwood City's prosperity.

The Belle Haven Corporation is about to place on sale an initial subdivision of the Sweeney Rranch at prices so low that it seems rediculous to quote and with terms that every one can meet.

All activities will center in and around the Sweeney Ranch.

Watch for the announcement and be ready to act.

BOHEMIANS DEFEAT Y. M. I. 10 TO 9 HERE

Numerous Hits Featured Sunday Afternoon's Game

By JOHN RYAN

In spite of Pitcher "Tick" Hallett's persistent efforts to subdue them, the Bohemian Garage nine from San Francisco defeated the Redwood Council Y. M. I. baseball team in a slugfest last Sunday on the Sequoia lot. The score, 10 to 9, clearly indicates the numerous hits which featured the afternoon's festivities. Hallett fanned 12 and issued no passes while the opposing chucker, Ellison, fanned but four men and donated five passes to the locals.

Except for the pitchers, the teams were evenly matched, man to man. Hallett out-did his opponent throughout the game. The city team displayed a smooth working infield, hit the ball hard and often and generally lived up to the reputation they enjoy among semi-pro teams in the metropolis.

Allain, fiery topped shortstop, led the home talents hitting, getting three safe cracks all of which were converted into runs. Stevens, Herm and Bartolomei each connected for two safe bingles.

The Bohemians started off strong, scoring once in the first, twice in the second and five in the third. Ten hits were made in these innings and then Hallett tightened up. Two of Redwood's three errors were made in the first three innings, both resulting in score.

Bullivant's men made a good showing with the willow—everyone of his men, getting at least one hit except Bill Brook, first sacker, who had his first day off at the plate this season.

"Peachy" Chaves turned in his usual big league showing as umpire and announcer.

Old Comrades

"Old Comrade!" So they greet beneath
Their flag—the boys of sixty-three—
Long has the sword been in its sheath
Since the great fights of Grant and Lee;
Still, when Reunion's drummers beat,
They come (Alas! how few they are!)
Marching again with eager feet—
The comrades of the G. A. R.

All honor to you, Comrades old;
Sons of your sons look on and feel
Pride in your loyal spirits bold;
We catch your patriotic zeal.
That flag above your silver hair
Shall always be our guiding star
Because your loved hands held it there,
Brave comrades of the G. A. R.

Ice Box Solves Your Food Luncheon Problem

A well-iced refrigerator in the home is essential to entertainment, particularly where the hostess must prepare the food as well as serve it. In order to save time and to alow her to devote her guests, without leaving them to prepare refreshments, these may be made up hours in advance and kept in the ice-box until needed.

Sandwiches, gelatine, salads, desserts, iced drinks, ice creams and ices are ideal for inclusion in such an "ice-box menu," according to household economists, who have assembled some excellent recipes suitable for such occasions.

On of them is tomato jelly. This calls for the use of the following: 1 1-2 level tablespoons of granulated gelatine; 1-4 cup of cold water; . cupsful of cooked tomatoes. 2 cloves; 1 level tablespoon of minced onions; 1-4 teaspoon of salt, a few grains of cayenne, and 1 tablespoonful of vinegar.

Put tomatoes, cloves, onions, salt and cayenne over a medium fire and simmer for 10 minutes. Strain through a fine sieve and add gelatine which has been soaked five minutes in cold water. Stir until gelatine is dissolved, then pour into individual molds which have been rinsed with cold water. Let cool, then stand in ice-box until firm. Unmold, garnish with shredded leaf lettuce, and serve with mayonnaise.

Mrs. Jack Benson of 228 Main street and Mrs. William C. Glass and daughter Bernice of Burlingame, and Miss Margaret Magee of Lincoln avenue, this city, are on a two weeks' vacation in the Santa Cruz mountains, sojourning at Ben Lomond Lodge.

At last Julia spoke, in a tone of fresh alarm:

"Charles, what are you going to do now?"

"I'm going to keep right after it; get that, will you?" snapped her cousin, defiantly. "And I'll see Bullard if I get a chance, too! Watch out! Maybe you can make yourself useful, after all."

Julia stared.

"I haven't an idea what you're talking about."

Conciliation and expectancy forsook MacIvor's face.

"See here, are you trying to double cross me?" he demanded threateningly. "Do you realize what can happen to you if you don't explain this, and whatever else I ask you to explain?"

The girl was frightened beyond the power of speech, so savagely did MacIvor address her, but his menaces had the exact opposite effect on me.

"See here," I intervened crossly "stop that!"

"I beg your pardon?" demanded Charles MacIvor, white with fury.

"What I mean is," I explained carefully, "that you are to stop frightening Miss Grosvenor. Do you see?"

"Who are you? What are you doing here?" he burst out. "No, don't wait to explain: I order you out of this house!"

"I know it's yours," I assured him pleasantly; "you said so, you know. But as your cousin has asked me not to leave her, I shall take her with me, and go, as you request. Miss Grosvenor, I hope you will refuse to transact any more business tonight, and come with me to Miss Burton's apartment."

I took her arm, and she let me, but MacIvor seized her by the other arm, and stopped our progress toward the door. He looked at me, however, first sharply, then fiercely. Then he flung her arm violently from him, and set on me.

"You're that red-headed clerk at Darrow's!" he gasped hoarsely. "You're in this, too, are you? We'll see about that!"

It is the regret of my life that I do not know what might have happened next. What did happen next was a knock, a gentle one, fell on the hall door. We were all startled; MacIvor rushed to the lamp and extinguished it; in the darkness we heard the French window open. But the next second he was back from the balcony. A second knock fell on the door, and a woman's voice whispered clearly: "Signorina! Signorina!"

"It's only Ernesto' wife," breathed Julia, relieved. "Sì, sì subito, signora! Turn the light on, Charles."

He did so, snatched his cap from the table, and withdrew into the rear room, closing the door. I stood in the back of the room, Julia went forward and opened the door, and in walked—I heard his voice in utter amazement—Mr. Almy!

"Sorry to disturb you at this hour Miss Grosvenor," he said; "but your cousin is here, and he must come with us. Don't make any trouble, please. Where is he?"

But although resistance was plainly quite useless, Julia declined to betray her cousin in any way. She snapped her teeth shut, glaring defiantly at Mr. Almy without a word. He dashed straight at the door in the rear of the long room. At the instant he reached it at full impetus, it burst open so suddenly that he nearly lost his balance as Charles MacIvor stepped out on the threshold of the adjoining kitchen quite cheerfully.

"You're Charles MacIvor," said Mr Almy, "and I have a warrant for your arrest."

"I was expecting you," said MacIvor, impudently. "I passed your men down in the street, you know. Well what's the charge? Murder, of course?"

"Unfortunately," returned Mr. Almy curtly, "it's larceny. What did you do with those bonds."

MacIvor's eyes opened wide, his face turned scarlet with rage. He hurled himself toward Julia and shouted:

"So you've double-crossed me twice Don't expect me to save you again!"

There was a brief moment of confusion; Julia gave a choked scream and sank into a chair, hiding her face; two policemen rushed in and MacIvor vanished with them. Mr. Almy went up to Julia and spoke soothingly to her; she did not answer him, or move. Next moment I found myself out in the hall with him.

I explained in a sentence how I came to be there. Then he murmured:

"I'll see you tomorrow; Miss Grosvenor needn't be disturbed further tonight," and hurried downstairs. So I turned upstairs, since there was nothing more I could do for Julia just then and my mind reverted to Nancy. Why and where had she disappeared so suddenly?

Having no key, I knocked on the Burton door several times. There was no response. As forlorn hope, I tried the handle, and it turned. Some one had slipped the catch. I entered the living room, the lamp on the table was lighted. Both bedroom doors were shut. On Nancy's I knocked, once, twice, three times. Again there was no response. In considerable alarm I made bold to try that handle, too, and it also turned. And there, in her little room, in her little bed, lay Nancy in the first correct sleeping position, a charming picture from the Land of Dreams.

But her unconscious mind functioned well; next instant an arm shot out, and on went the electric lamp beside her.

"That you, Contsance?" she inquired calmly. "I know it's not manners, to got to bed before the company does, but the poor working girl needs her sleep. What kept you?"

"Don't you remember that man that came into Miss Grosvenor's apartment from the balcony?" I gasped.

Nancy sat up in bed, blinked, and appeared to reflect.

"Oh, yes, I remember him," she observed finally. "When I saw Julia knew him, I knew there was no danger. Yes, I heard the revolver. No, Constance, he did not have it. He put up one hand to take off his cap, and the other was empty. I saw as much as that before I cleared out because I wasn't wanted. Whoever had it, he didn't, so there was no danger for you or Julia. Do tell me what happened."

"That man was Charles MacIvor, Miss Grosvenor's cousin," I said. "I stayed because she asked me to; she was evidently afraid of him. They talked at some length regarding something he wanted to get that was not here. What finally happened was that the police, who had traced Charles MacIvor here, arrived and arrested him. He is charged with theft."

"Of what?"

"Securities."

"Well, if that's all, it's not important."

"What are you talking about?" I demanded, agape.

"A poor fish," replied Nancy sweetly, "named, as you prefer, Charles MacIvor or Brandon Tower. And now I will show you what he wanted."

With one bound she was on the floor, with one swoop she had turned back blankets, sheets, mattress. On the spring lay a small flat object neatly wrapped in an embroidered hand towel. She unwrapped the hand towel, and presented me with a worn brown calfskin volume, entitled 'Notes on Medical Statutes in the Virginia Code."

"Take care of it next time, Constance dear," she warned me; "somebody might steal it."

"But, Nancy! But how . . . where why . . .?" I stammered gazing wildeyed at the returned wanderer. But the bound and the swoop had occurred in reverse order, as Nancy's red, red mouth slowly expanded to its full vertical measurement. The arm shot out again, the light was snapped off.

"I'll call you tomorrow after I make the coffee," said Nancy. "Cheer up, tomorrow will be another day. If you sleep in that faith you will prevail. I always do. Good night."

The coffee was not made until a quarter past eight. The ensuing scramble to get off to Darrow's gave no time for inquiries until we were en route up Normandy terrace. Then I demanded information instantly about the filching of the law book. I learned that Nancy had taken it from my lowest left-hand drawer the sole time during the previous morning that my back had been turned on my desk; namely, just before she went out to luncheon with Mr. Dibdin.

"But, Nancy, what right had you to steal it?"

"No right—nobody ever has a right to steal, don't you know that?—but a duty. Wilkey wanted it. It was my duty to keep her from getting it, because I wanted it for Peter, and she wanted it only for a distant relative, her cousin."

"You are sure of that, are you?"

"Surely. I told her you kept it in your lowest left-hand drawer; and then I nabbed it myself."

"But, Nancy, why?"

"Well, Constance, I'll tell you why," announced Nancy, suddenly serious an instant. "You know I told you how that moron of a Brandon Tower—I mean Charles MacIvor, of course; why he worked as a shorthand teacher in a business college, and changed his proud name, is still hidden from me, though I'm going to find it out yet—I told you how he changed the suitcases that time we went to Philadelphia?

"I thought and thought about how he tried to get rid of me, until I began to wonder why he did it. Then I remembered that every time he did it, he grabbed that suitcase. Before we left the house, you know, he changed mine for Peter's, evidently I came downstairs too fast for him to get out of the door with it. He was going to try to leave the train at Trenton, I believe; if I hadn't come back from the full diner, he'd have succeeded. And he tried to clear out of the Board Street station. He even waited there until I was going, you know, not aware that Peter had come for me, and doubtless hoping for some last chance to grab the suitcase again; I wasn't the attraction, I'm convinced now.

"Then I wondered what there was in that bag he wanted. Not Peter's clothes, Brandon, . . . or Charles . . . or what have you? . . . has stacks of awful ones, himself. But, knowing him, I knew his purpose in wanting it must be bad. And when he popped in through that window last night, and Julia addressed him as 'Charles'—and he saw me—dear one, he saw me, if I did do a disappearing act—I knew he was her cousin who had been after Peter's book, and had tricked me, and gone around under a assumed name. And I felt sure he was after it then and there. So I hopped upstairs and took care of it. Now, do you see why, as you say?"

Even Nancy finally paused, breathless. I said:

"I don't see why you took the book out of my desk. You didn't know at noon yesterday that Charles MacIvor was Brandon Tower, or that he wanted the book at all—"

"I knew Brandon Tower would be liable to come after that book any time, though," interrupted Nancy, implacably. "Before Peter went to

"You're That Red-Headed Clerk at Darrow's," He Gasped Hoarsely

Raynes Foreside, he told me that handsome polite young man had come into the shop on Monday, and slid out again when he found him there! Peter wanted to warn me, you see, especially since he was to be away."

"And you didn't think I should be equal to taking care of the book?"

"Not when Wilkey was after it too . . . and maybe other people."

"'Other people' were after the book? To whom do you allude, Nancy?"

"'Maybe other people,' she said. Maybe Mr. Case."

"Mr. Case?" I repeated feebly. "Why Mr. Case? He's been with the firm for years and years . . . he's a gentleman . . . he is absolutely excellent and entirely commonplace . . . why should you think he had designs on that book?"

"Because," insisted Nancy, stubbornly, "he was hanging round all the time you and I were working together on that catalogue late Thursday afternoon, when everybody else had left the building."

"How do you know?"

"I saw him. You said you were going to put the books which had been listed back on the shelves. He took that in. So, when I took my new work, I snatched that book up with the rest. He was looking in the law book section to see if it had been replaced there, by any chance."

"What time did you see him doing that?" I asked thoughtfully.

"Shortly before I left at six o'clock."

"Then," I thought to myself, "Mr Case explored those law book shelves at a time he thought himself alone; and not finding what he wanted there, made an attempt on my desk later! He couldn't have known which drawer it was in, of course. He must have just started to search the largest one when Charles MacIvor made his appearance. What was he doing there? Looking for the book, of course."

"So you see, Constance," concluded Nancy, accepting my silence as a personal tribute, "I saw you really had too much to do, with that catalogue and everything, so I took charge of the book temporarily to help you. And, of course, I had to help Peter."

But exegesis of this obscure remark, as well as satisfactory conclusions for my own wonderings, had to be postponed. We had reached Darrow's.

I hastened forth to my desk, to find it already occupied, by Captain Ashland.

"You said I could bother you any time!" he greeted me.

"I always mean what I say. So you've come down from Westchester to learn more about the index?"

"Gracious! business during the week-end? I've come on pleasure. You know that bookplate we were talking about the other day?"

I did not associate the Colfax bookplate with pleasure, but I nodded—intelligently, I trusted.

"You know that forgery rather took hold of me," confided the captain. "I wondered if I could find an original for the counterfeit."

"Oh!" said I (an expression I disapprove of, but I was struck all of a heap by the suddenness of the idea). "Why?"

"Because Colfax might have drawn a pictorial bookplate, even if he seldom did so, and I think the manner of execution of that drawing you showed me indicates that it must have been copied from a model. The conception of the design is masterly, but the copying is just a faint shade too careful; and whoever made the drawing was not quite craftsman enough to avoid that small slip in the signature. So I've decided to amuse myself trying to discover an original. You'll help me, won't you?" begged the captain. "Don't say you will if you can."

"I will because I can, then."

"Good! I spent yesterday unpacking. I brought nineteen boxes of books with me. My reference library, you know. Now, the reason I unpacked them was . . . that bookplate! I say you haven't it around anywhere, I suppose?"

I plucked it out of the law book in such a way as not to reveal the key, for Captain Ashland was, of course, not interested in the Grosvenor mystery—indeed, disliked it, I felt sure.

"I'll tell you what I've done so far," he said, "th ugh it's not much. I believe my library has as good works about English engravers as can be found; yet I can't discover much about Colfax himself. But I found the exact dates of his birth and death, 1760 and 1831. Then I found a descriptive list of all his engravings, and tried to identify this drawing with any one described, but he had drawn only a couple of pictorial plates, both floral, for ladies' libraries—no scientific instruments or warships—so that attempt was a fluke."

"Warships? Oh, yes, that vessel is a frigate," I assented, noting again the characteristic three masts and broadside armament clearly shown in the fine drawing.

"And English built," declared the captain, "early Nineteenth century, when British warships were built very wide through the beam, like this one."

"I hasn't any flag, though," I pointed out.

"I noted that; it's odd," agreed the captain. "Nevertheless, it's a British vessel, and Colfax had a personal connection with the British navy."

"That's a good thing to know!" I exclaimed, encouraged. "How did you find it out?"

Vanity of Pakenham Brought His Defeat

The American forces under Andrew Jackson at New Orleans in January, 1815, inflicted severe losses on the British troops because General Pakenham, the British commander, insisted upon carrying out a set method of attack which did not prove successful against the Americans, points out Clifford Raymond in an article in Liberty.

"It was British tradition," continues the author, "that troops could take a position in frontal attack, carrying material for filling ditches and ladders for scaling walls. It was also in the history of British regiments in America that they had not done it on many occasions; but Pakenham, with his reputation to maintain, was convinced that he had do it, even with Andrew Jackson animating the troops behind the breastworks.

"Pakenham died rallying the men," explains Raymond, "when they withered under the rifle and artillery fire. Before that fire, in 25 minutes the storm troops of Great Britain disappeared. There were 700 killed, 1,400 wounded, and 500 taken prisoners. The American loss was 8 killed and 13 wounded."

Night Winds in Mountains

A meteorological phenomenon found among the high mountains and noticeable in many places in Waterton lakes national park in southern Alberta is the night wind from the mountain tops. During the heat of the day the warm air rises from the valleys, but at sunset a current of air from the peaks rushes downward, bringing with it the scents of pines and larches, and it may be of the flowers of some alpine meadow a couple of thousand feet above.

History From New Angle

It was the anniversary of the discovery of America. The primary room was decorated for the occasion and much was said during the day about Columbus and what he discovered. Bobby was relating at dinner the events of the day and said: "I know why we have Halloween. We had it at school. Columbus found Indians with false faces."

Start Shopping for Pilots

Donie Bush.

IT IS a bit early, but in some spots of the majors there is a tendency to start out shopping for 1929 managers. This tendency is indicated by writers, not the owners, but it so happens that writers frequently know definitely of things they only dare hint at in their writings, hence the present rumblings are worthy of note, writes Irving Vaughan in the Chicago Tribune. They may break out into real noise eventually.

One incumbent whose name already has been mentioned in connection with tinware is Donie Bush, whose Pirates are not doing so well. Another is Bill McKechnie, who, after falling out at Pittsburgh, fell in at St. Louis. One more is George Moriarty, high priest of the docile Tigers. And in Chicago you can hear statements to the effect that unless the White Sox perk up considerably there will be some other fellow around to carry the grief now resting on Ray Schalk's shoulders.

Bush has become sort of a back number at Pittsburgh because of his failure to bring the Pirates out of the mist that enveloped them in the world series last fall. Bush has had a staggering string of mishaps to contend with and a portion of his present predicament can be charged to this. But, probably because he has let himself become panic stricken over the unexpected reverses, his team is disorganized and unable to give its best. Rules restricting the liberties of the players almost caused open rebellion.

McKechnie's insecurity is traced to two factors. One is that he is not a natural leader. He is the kind who undo themselves by their fear to appear hard boiled. George Sisler was a managerial flop for this same reason. The other is that McKechnie is employed by a firm that conducts its business in a peculiar fashion. The moves of Breadon and Rickey cannot be explained. As an example, there was that dismissal of Hornsby a few months after he had won a pennant and world's championship title. A year later Bob O'Farrell, who had steered the Cardinals into second place, was handled in a similar manner.

Trousers of Fan Saved by Heavy Hitting Star

To bet one's trousers on a favorite ball player—greater loyalty than that does not exist. Such was the verdict of Dubuque sport fans upon the wager made by Donald Birkett.

Birkett has been an ardent admirer of Jimmy Worth, the crack fielder and most wicked club wielder of the Dubuque ball club. When Jimmy cracked them out in great style during a recent series Birkett offered to bet anything he owned that Worth would finish the week with an average of .500.

Harry Voight took up the enterprising better's challenge, and as Birkett had no money, he decided to bet his trousers. So they agreed that if Birkett won Voight was to buy him a new pair; and if lost, Voight was to take his old ones.

Worth was worth it. By the end of the series he was smacking them out at .575. Birkett sports a new pair of trousers; Voight says Donald's old ones won't fit him.

GRID STRATEGISTS' COACHING SCHOOL

Northwestern to Entertain Coaches in August.

Applications have been received from all over the United States from coaches who plan to attend the sessions conducted by the all-star coaching school staff at Northwestern university August 13 to 25.

Coach Dick Hanley, head football mentor at Northwestern, will have charge of the football course and is to be assisted by such nationally famous coaches as Jess Hawley of Dartmouth; Arnold Horween of Harvard; Walter Steffen of Carnegie Tech and Duke Dunne, also of Harvard. These latter experts will deliver supplementary lectures to Coach Hanley's series of talks and field demonstrations.

The above group of grid strategists conducted last year's course which far excelled the expectations of the coaches in attendance. Mr. Hawley will speak on the forward pass, a phase of football he has perfected to a marked degree. Backfield play will be discussed by Coach Horween while spin plays will be the topic of Coach Steffen's discourse. Duke Dunne, one of the great line coaches of the country, will devote his talk to this feature of the game.

Besides football, courses are also to be given in basket ball, track and athletic administration. Coach Arthur "Dutch" Lonborg, who made his entry into the Big Ten this year as head basket ball coach at Northwestern, will have charge of the basket ball classes. Coach Lonborg wound up his first season in the Western conference with nine victories out of 12 big Ten games. While a student at Kansas university, where he learned the game under Dr. Forrest Allen, he was an all-valley guard for three years.

Coach Frank Hill, head track coach at Northwestern, will have charge of the track course. Coach Hill will attend the Olympic games at Amsterdam and will bring back fresh impressions of the great performances which are certain to be seen at the games.

Kenneth L. "Tug" Wilson, athletic director at Northwestern and a leading figure in middle western athletics will give his popular course in "Organization and Theory of Athletic Departments." His course proved the most popular last year and many of his students have already signified their intention of continuing it this summer.

Winnings Not Wasted

London.—Tales of those who lose at gambling are seldom heard unless they take to crime or commit suicide as a result of their losses. Big winners at gambling flash across the newspaper horizon for a day or two and are soon forgotten, but the newspaper render often wonders what the big winners do with their easily-gained fortunes. Do they blow them in quickly in riotous living, or do they save and usefully invest the money?

Now that the season is at hand when every true born Briton has a ticket in some sweepstake the London Daily Mail has looked up some of the men and women who struck it luckily in recent years. The investigation has revealed that so far as can be found, the past winners have not become wild spendthrifts by their good luck, but have thoughtfully used their money where it would do the most good.

William Kilpatrick, the Capetown dental mechanic, formerly of Leeds, who won $300,000 in the Calcutta sweep last year, has just returned to Milnthorpe, Westmoreland, where his mother and sweetheart live. He is to be married in July. He visited Milnthorpe soon after his success, but returned to Capetown in the autumn.

Immediately it was known that he was the winner last year friends in Capetown formed him into a limited liability company, so that his good nature could not be worked upon by sharks or anybody else. He settled on his mother and sisters at Milnthorpe a sum sufficient to bring them in a comfortable income. He also bought them a house and a motor car.

He established and endowed a soup kitchen in Capetown, where he intends to make his home.

James Strang of Pollok street, Glasgow, who won $36,000 with a $25 treble at last year's Derby, told a reporter that he had invested the money very profitably. He has continued in his occupation as a traveling man.

Mrs. Ford, part owner of a ticket which won a little over $150,000 in the Derby sweepstake organized at Otley in 1923, still lives in her modest home in Pembroke street, Skipton, Yorkshire. Mrs. Ford had a quarter-share of a $2.50 ticket, half a share was owned by her mother, Mrs. Hodgson, who has since died, and the other quarter was in the name of a Mrs. Griffin, who was engaged as a cook in a Skipton coffee house. Mrs. Hodgson distributed most of her $75,000 among seven relatives.

Tourists Will Miss Old "Flea Market"

Paris.—The French capital's world famous "flea market," venerable hunting ground for collectors of antiques, curios, Paisley shawls, possible Rembrandts, and low-priced and unclassifiable objects of every possible description, has finally received its death blow after seven centuries of business. Disapproved by the city officials and ignominiously shifted about from one to another of the city's outposts, the ancient mart succeeded in fighting every move to end its days until the passage of the new Sunday closing law, which automatically deprives it of its principal source of income.

For years American visitors and other foreigners have visited the Marche-aux-Puces every Sabbath to prowl among the curious displays of rusty nails, stovepipes, oily rags, and assorted junk for overlooked treasures until the wily merchants have become clever enough to conceal imitation antiques among worthless trinkets in the hope that ambitious amateurs would "discover" them and pay several times their value. In this manner the fair gradually lost its prestige until it reached a precarious state. With the weekly arrest of dozens of its merchants and the Sunday closing edict its doom is now sealed and its merchants are seeking other means of making a living.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Rosetta Stone

To the Rosetta stone, found in Rosetta, Egypt, by officers of the French army under Napolean, we owe much of our knowledge of Egyptian history. Here the same story was told in three kinds of writing, one of which was the unknown Egyptian, and through their knowledge of one of these, men learned to read the others.

Seeks to Have Old Divorce Set Aside

Lincoln, Neb.—The annulment of a divorce 18 years after her husband's death and 44 years after the decree was granted is sought by Mrs. Nancy E. Dermit of South Sioux City, Neb.

Mrs. Dermit, who is seventy-two years old, was not aware until after the death of her husband, a Civil war veteran, that she had been divorced from him. In 1884, the couple had trouble and separated and Mrs. Dermit began suit for divorce. Before the decree was granted, however, there was a reconciliation, and they began living together again, two more children being born.

Mrs. Dermit did not notify her attorney to cease efforts to obtain the divorce, she says, and he went ahead and got it. It is now held that the divorce was illegal without her appearance or testimony, but attorneys cannot find any way to prove that she and her witnesses were not present.

The judge who granted the divorce and the clerk of the court are now dead. Mrs. Dermit cannot go into court to have the divorce annulled, as her husband would have to be named defendant in that case. A suit cannot be brought directly against the district court.

When Dermit died in 1910, Mrs. Dermit applied to the pension department and it was then that the divorce was revealed. The couple lived in Iowa for years and that state recognizes a common law marriage, which their union was after the divorce. The pension department does not recognize common law marriages.

Several bills have been introduced in congress to permit her name to be placed on the roll of widows entitled to a pension, but none of them has passed.

An appeal from the pension board's decision to the United States Supreme court is being considered.

If Mrs. Dermit succeeds, she will be entitled to $4,500 back pension and $30 a month.

Escapes With Five Kisses, Jailed for Taking Sixth

New York.—If Michael Gallagher had not been homesick for the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn, it might never have happened, he explained in police court. He was homesick and so he visited the section.

It was as wonderful as ever—and so were the Greenpoint girls. He kissed five he passed on the street. All seemed to get the idea that he meant well and to believe a watched kiss never boils, anyway, so they shooed him on his way forgivingly.

Then he met Miss Mae Hiryak, a stenographer who screamed and fought, and three Greenpoint young men who happened to be passing leaped upon Gallagher.

"Your honor," Gallagher said the next morning. "I believe Greenpoint has the prettiest girls in the world I just couldn't help it."

"But Greenpoint can't stand for this." Five dollars and three days in jail," replied the court.

Bill's Passing Surely Untimely for Sandy

Old Bill Harley, a hermit well known to the fishermen who yearly visited the district of Snake island for holiday sport, was dead. His demise was the subject of conversation as a party of fishermen gathered in camp for the evening meal, and each had a kindly word of regret to express.

"Here comes Sandy McIntosh," remarked one of the group, "even he will feel bad about Old Bill. Sandy, we've just heard a bit of bad news."

"Well," said Sandy, "and what is it?"

"Old Bill Harley, over on Snake island, has just kicked out."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed Sandy. "Dead, is it? That is too bad. Untimely, too."

The others were somewhat surprised at the unemotional Sandy taking it so hard.

"It's true, all right," said some one, "but the old chap's death is timely, enough. He was a very old man."

"Timely, you say!" exclaimed Sandy. "And only yesterday I lent him 90 cents!"—Judge.

Cute in a Baby—Awful at Three —and it's Dangerous

by Ruth Brittain

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Pinning the sleeve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent bending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't act at first, a little Fletcher's Castoria will soon regulate them. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.

Champion Optimist

This John Smith is distinguished by being a liveryman still doing business in New York, N. J., although most of his "business" is polishing up his old carriages. He is not at all impressed by the 20,000,000 motor cars in the country. There was the bicycle and look how that fad went by! "I'm over seventy now," he says, "and I've been in this business 50 years and I expect to stay in it. They can't scare me out, because I know the tide is going to turn. Just as soon as this younger generation finds out the fun there is in taking their girls out for a buggy ride, business will pick up again,"—Indianapolis News.

DON'T suffer headaches, or any of those pains that Bayer Aspirin can end in a hurry! Physicians prescribe it, and approve its free use, for it does not affect the heart. Every druggist has it, but don't fail to ask the druggist for Bayer. And don't take any but the box that says Bayer, with the word genuine printed in red:

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

The Inspiration of the Audience

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I WAS to make a speech somewhere in Indiana not long ago, and a week or two before the event I had a note from the man in charge of the dinner or meeting of the association or whatever it was which required that some one say something, asking for a synopsis or a resume of what I proposed saying. I had to reply that I seldom write out my speeches. I am very informal, and what I say and the way I say it depends to a large extent upon the response I get from individual members of the audience.

If I see my hearers growing restless or dropping off comfortably to sleep I change my tactics. I say something I had perhaps not intended at all to say, and I am very likely to cut my speech short. There is nothing I so much dislike as to tire or to bore people. I shall never make a good broadcaster over the radio. To do my best I must see the effect of what I am doing upon those who are listening. I spoke once years ago to an audience sitting almost in total darkness. It was a curious experience. I knew only vaguely whether they were awake or asleep. Sometimes a little ripple of appreciation went over the group, but for the most part I might as well have been talking to a blank wall. What I needed to make me do my best, as I believe almost every speaker needs, was the inspiration of a wide awake audience.

There is nothing which takes the life out of a speaker more than to see scattered about the audience room a few of those present sound asleep. True, it is hard to keep some people awake no matter what one is saying or how he is saying it. I have in mind now a middle-aged acquaintance of mine whom I do not now recall ever being seen awake during an address to which he was being exposed. Some day I hope to have a chance to try him out, for I believe the test of a speech is the percentage of listeners who can be kept at alert and interested attention, and the originality of the speaker and the spontaneity of his speech is largely influenced by the inspiration which comes from sympathetic and responsive attention.

No one whom I have ever heard, I think, felt the influence of this inspirational response from his audience more than Mr. Dwight L. Moody, the great evangelist. I heard him say once that he could scarcely go on with an address when he could see some inattentive person among his auditors. His main interest and effort in such a case was not the message which he was trying to deliver but the gaining of the attention of the uninterested auditor. He did this even if he had to use spectacular means. Otherwise, he said, his speech was a failure.

European Air Courses to Be Marked at Night

Le Bourget, France.—Night flyers soon will have good signal lights by which to steer their course on four air highways.

The way from Paris to London, Brussels, Marseilles and Perpignan will be marked with orange-colored neon electric lights which will flash continually the Morse code for the letters that will identify them.

There is but little flying in the dark as yet, but in every way French aviation is trying to prepare for the imminent development of night travel. One branch of this work is the training of pilots to steer by instruments alone. The men are taught by handling planes, in which they are enclosed in a dark cabinet, while another pilot who can see the ground prevents accidents by correcting errors through double control.

Three Horns to a Car Is Rule in Venezuela

Caracas.—Venezuela's laws require every automobile to have two horns, but the really well equipped cars carry three, making the country a good market for such accessories. The law demands a hand horn for city driving and an electrically-operated signal for use on country roads. Drivers in mountainous territory add a third, operated by a button placed conveniently near the left knee, to permit quick or constant operation on steep grades and sharp curves.

Ash Carts Blazon Glories of Potsdam

Potsdam, Germany.—Citizens of the former kaiser's old residence rubbed their eyes in astonishment the other day when a number of brand new municipal vehicles appeared on the streets with "Residential City of Potsdam" painted on them.

Everybody is asking whether it is by accident or design that old memories of imperial splendor should be revived, and why the new municipal ash carts should be selected to blazon them forth.

To complete the outfit she wears Chinese sandals. When she removes the tight rubber bathing cap, Miss Loy wears this brilliantly colored handkerchief that blends with the colors in the coat and trousers.

PALO ALTO HORSE SHOW TO BE HELD AUGUST 4 TO 11

$22,000.00 In Prizes To Be Distributed

The second annual Palo Alto horse show will open with a matinee performance on Saturday, August 4th, continuing every evening except Sunday until Saturday, August 11th, with another matinee on Friday, the 11th.

Last year's Palo Alto show is said to have been the equal of any held in America, and from all indications the forthcoming event will have at least 20 percent more entries and a very considerable increase in quality. There were 699 entries last year, many of them coming from points east of the Mississippi river.

The preliminary classification and prize list for this year is in the hands of exhibitors and carries $22,000.00 in premiums which make Palo Alto one of the six leading shows in the country. Mrs. W. P. Roth of San Francisco, whose Why Worry Farm at Woodside houses one of the largest and best balanced show stables in America, is president of the show; Atholl McBean of Woodside, last year's president is vice-president; G. Albert Lansburgh of San Francisco, treasurer, and Alfred P. Fleming, a notable figure in the horse show world, is secretary-manager. Ninety-seven classes will be shown of which 14 are stake events of $500 and 1,000.

The arena and show barns are now under construction at a point adjoining the aviation field on Stanford campus and the setting amongst live oaks and eucalypti is far more attractive than it was last year when the ball park was used.

Reservations for boxes for the week of the show are now being made at the horse show office, Whitcomb Hotel, San Francisco and at the Chamber of Commerce, Palo Alto, San Mateo, Redwood City and Menlo Park.

The many friends of Mrs. Helen F. Donnelley will be pleased to learn that she is recovering from an accident which occured last Sunday. She slipped and fell on her recently oiled kitchen floor, sustaining a fracture of the ligaments of her right leg. Though painful the injury is not serious.

Mrs. Frank Polglase of San Jose is a house guest this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Polglase on Middlefield road. Mr. and Mrs. Polglase will leave Monday for Nevada City, where they will spend a vacation of two weeks visiting friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar A. Sahlberg, with their three daughters, Jean, Muriel and Dorothy, and Mrs. Claude Fox are spending the week at Yosemite, viewing the grandeur o nature's handiwork.

MANY RUNNING UNOPPOSED FOR STATE OFFICES

By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, July 12 — A prophet may be without honor in his own country, but it appears that legislators are honored at home in spite of the wise-cracks to the contrary.

So declared, Charles Hagerty, election statistician, today as he counted prospective political noses.

"California's legislative complexion, both state and national, will maintain its pre-election hue," Hagerty predicted.

"When a president is inaugurated next March, it is likely that he will be greeted by the same delegation from this state. For Hiram Johnson is almost certain to hold on to his senatorial toga," in Hagerty's opinion, "while six of our eleven congressmen are running without an opponent to even pace them in the ballot race."

All of the even incumbent congressmen, including one congresswoman, Mrs. Florence Kahn of San Francisco, are seeking re-election. Two of the five facing contests are incontested on the Republican ticket; Congressman H. E. Barbour of Fresno being opposed by Editor John H. Fairweather of Reedley, a democrat; and Congressman Albert E. Carter of Oakland contesting with Burton Hall, a democrat of Berkeley, Hagerty reports.

The Democratic party will be represented in the next Congress by one member, it is certain, since Clarence F. Lea of the first district is unopposed. The Democratic endorsement is valued by all the Republican incumbents, however, except William E. Evans of Glendale, who is the only member of the G. O. P. who has not also filed on the Democratic ticket.

Two new feminine hands seek to steer the national ship of state, according to Hagerty. He reports that Mrs. Cecelia C. Casserly, an "Al" Smith-Democratic sponsor, is contesting with Congressman A. M. Free on both tickets for the right to represent the Peninsula and Santa Clara Valley district; while Lena Morrow Lewis of San Francisco is the only socialist candidate for the U. S. Senate.

Familiar faces also promise to appear again next January in the state legislative halls, Hagerty says.

With only 20 state senators to be elected this year, fifteen of the present membership is asking a return to office, and six of these are uncontested, it appears from election statistics.

The Republican party scores more hits on the "preferred" list than the Democratic for out of 44 candidates for the 20 senatorial place, the Republican nomination is asked by 41, while only 19 seek the approval of the Democratic party.

Similarly out of a grand total of 181 candidates for the 80 Assembly offices, 79 ask the Democratic nomination and 175 the Republican.

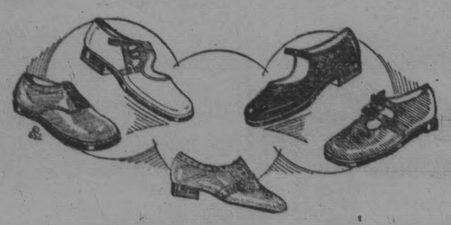

The vanishing of party lines is particularly evident in northern and central California, where most candidates court the approval of both of the major parties, Hagerty explains, while Los Angeles furnishes a greater political variety than any other community, legislitively speaking. The southern city enters three socialists in the assembly race and one prohibitionists, the only candidates of the parties for state offices.

The city man apparently has a greater perchant for running for office than his county brother, Hagerty asserts citing a single assembly district in Los Angeles, where there are ten contestants. The next highest candidacy score is made by the 21st Asesmbly District in San Francisco with five entries.

The call of the gavel is so powerful two state senators are seeking a return to the lower house, rather than retire from political life. One is Chester Kline of San Jacinto, who observing the "gentleman's agreement" between Orange and Riverside counties refused to seek his senatorial seat again, and the other is Senator Charles H. V. Lewis of Los Angeles.

In the Assembly race 24 of the incumbents are uncontested while only 2 new entries start without a contest, proving the voters value experience, Hagerty thinks.

New Bait for Trout Used With Success

The beautiful summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hess, Jr., at La Honda has been the scene of gaiety during the past two weeks, were the well known couple have established themselves for two months. Mrs. Volpiano and her daughter, Mary of Woodside, have just returned and reported having had a delightful time. Mr. and Mrs. George Genochio and their son, Billy, are now enjoying the hospitality of the Hess home among the redwoods.

While Arnold and George were fishing in the San Gregorio lagoon they discovered a new bait, hitherto unknown, which the hungry trout took with such avidity that it was not unusual to catch two at once on a single hook. The result has been that the women olks have struck against a continued fish diet and when a report reached the office of the Fish and Game Commission, a special deputy was sent post haste down the coast to see that the law which prohibits the taking of more than twenty-five trout in one day was not being violated.

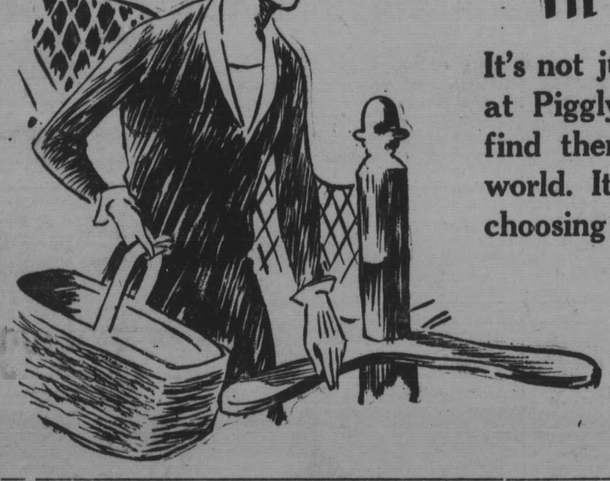

CHINESE SHRIMP FISHER ARRESTED FOR FISHING

Chang Laung, a shrimp fisher, was arrested this week by Game Warden Jack Burke for catching fish with a net, and paid a fine of $20 in the court of Justice of the Peace McAuliffe Wednesday. Shrimp fishers catch the shrimps in large nets and are supposed after removing the shrimps to put all fish that may be in the into the water. Chang was using the fish as shrimps, and was drying sale in San Francisco.
